SMITH TURNS TO SELECTION OF SUCCESSOR

Favors F. D. Roosevelt-Explains His Dry Law Modification Plan

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT ROCHESTER, N. Y .- The Democratic choice for Governor of New York, resting in the hands of Governor Smith, is controlled, it was explained by the latter's associates, by national rather than state political considerations. The situation that confronts him in the selection of his party's nominee to succeed him, his friends ex-plain, is the naming of a man who will add strength to Governor Smith's presidential race regardless of what this candidate's chances may be to win in New York.

This is not to say, it was emphatically asserted, that the holding of the Governorship is not a factor. New York Democracy, it was stated, has no intention of losing this office if it can help it. There is every desire to retain the place in the hands of the party.

Wants Strength for Own Race But at the same time, the presidential race is the more powerful determinant. Possible candidates, who, if Governor Smith were not running for President would be eminently acceptable to him, are being passed over by him in his council, it was declared, entirely because they would not add strength to his presidential effort.

The choice that is being sought, it was explained by men close to the Governor, is a candidate who is neither Roman Catholic nor Jew, who is a strong campaigner, who has a good record, who is not at all, or too closely, allied with Tammany Hall, and who will help in the presidential race in the country at large,

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR PHILADELPHIA, Pa.-Banking, in whatever form it is practiced, is based on gathering into a pile the thousand surplus funds in the community to be taken care of and used effectively by lending them to those who can use them profitably, said Louis T. McFadden, Representative from Pennsylvania, in a statement before the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, which has opened its fifty-fourth an-nual convention here. The Federal Reserve Board was based on the necessity for "credit for production with special reference to cor do-mestic situation."

Prosperity, Mr. McFadden said, had been defined as a balanced condition of production, distribution and con-sumption. It is the goal of all business activities. Stable credit conditions are essential to prosperity and such attainment may be defined as a balance between the volume of com-mercial and banking credit, and the

Even the fact of 3000 bank failures in the last seven years does not disturb the delegates. Bank failures are not a controversial topic. They will be handled by technical discussions and the solution is apparent, they believe, in the formation of bigger and better banks.

WOMEN EXHIBIT GROWING SCOPE

New York Reviews Work in Industry, Professions, Club and the Home

By MARJORIE SHULER

NEW YORK — Three hundred women exhibitors, representing the varied interests of business, profespating in the seventh annual Ex-position of Women's Arts and Industries just opened at the Astor Hotel

When the first show was organized seven years ago, there was a tend-ency on the part of the public to reoccupations as capricious phases of the world of affairs, challenging to men who previously had been in sole possession of certain fields of activity and indicating a feministic trend Eac

Women Still Know How to Cook But the sponsors of the show never have had such an attitude toward their work and they have gone steadily forward, directing the spotlight on the great masses of women en-gaged in politics, in social service and in education, as well as bringing forward the million-dollar women manufacturers, women inventors of unusual devices and women who have succeeded in occupations for which hitherto they have been realong with stained glass, shoes and of the federation, was so pleased with the abundant and delectable proof that women are not allowing cooking to become a lost art in the home that this year she has arranged to award another $100 prize for the best example of cooking submitted in the show, together with first, second and third prizes and honorable mentions.

In addition, Mrs. Gregory proposes to find out whether the sewing ma-chine and the needle are rusting away in the home while factories away in the home while factories develop the making and distribution of much of the wearing apparel formerly produced by the mother of the family. In her opinion, the "club woman is pre-eminent as a home maker and gives just as intelligent direction to her home as did her grandmother"; and, to show that home industries are not losing in artistry and value while women follow their other occupations out into low their other occupations out into the stores and factories, prizes will be given for the best sewing entries.

Spelling Bee for Girls The Brooklyn Botanic Garden is offering $50 in a flower arrangement contest, $200 will be given in prizes for painters and sculptors, and there is a $50 speedwriting contest and a $50 prize in a spelling bee for school

Each year women manufacturers form a large percentage of the exhibitors, the number in this show being 25, while more than 30 women artists prove that women in the artistic world are keeping pace with those who are forging ahead in business. With Mrs. Oliver Harriman as chairman, the show was formally opened with speeches by Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Rosalie Lowe Whitney of Brooklyn, garded as unfitted or unequipped.

BISHOPS' ACTION DECLARED TO BE 'DEPLORABLE

Much Adverse Opinion Is Called Forth by English Prayer Book Episode

BY WIRELESS FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-The Anglican bishops pronouncement regarding the use of the revised prayer book, which was rejected by Parliament, has already had a considerable adverse reaction The statement, it will be recalled indicated that-despite Parliament's rejection twice within 12 monthsthe bishops propose to adopt this version as a limit to the permissible variation in judging what modifica tions may be allowed in the church services as laid down by the prayer book of 1662.

The Bishop of Norwich, disassociating himself from his colleagues says that he "doesn't wish to be identified with the bishops' statement on the prayer book, and that later he will explain his reasons.

The Protestant Alliance, representing the widespread "low church" opinion, takes a stronger line. Characterizing the prelates' conclusions as "deplorable," the organization continues: "Although Parliament by its vote specifically condemned the practice of reservation, the bishops recommend the existing permission for this practice should hold good. We are unaware by what right they claim to authorize services which have been declared illegal, not only by the articles of religion but by the highest court in the land. Such proposals, which deliberately flout the authority of Parliament can never be accepted by loyal churchmen.

KEEPING AHEAD OF PUBLIC DEMAND

first used on a General Motors car before the public knew that a car could be started with anything but a crank.

Duco was developed and first used on a General Motors car before the public had any idea that there could be an automobile finish which would be both beautiful and enduring.

While two-wheel brakes were still regarded as entirely satisfactory, General Motors was the first quantity producer to begin the adoption of four-wheel brakes as standard equipment, thereby making a great contribution to comfort and safety in driving.

The V-type eight-cylinder engine came to car buyers as a revelation in performance. The entirely new type of four-wheel brakes, and the wonderful new transmission system—presented now for the first time on the Cadillac and LaSalle—are the latest evidence of General Motors' ability to give better and better performance in advance of public demand.

The same leadership is strikingly exemplified in the design and construction of Fisher Bodies.

The LaSalle set a wholly new style in automobiles. Today, after two years, you may see its influence in the appearance of a dozen other cars.

The new Buick is not only a new and still better Buick, but a new style of car as well.

Its luxurious Fisher Bodies are as important an advance in style as was the LaSalle. It is different from its predecessors. It is different from any other car. It sets a wholly new standard which others will seek to achieve.

The public response to these new models has taxed the plants of Buick and Cadillac and LaSalle to their utmost capacity. General Motors takes this opportunity of expressing its thanks, and of repeating its pledge of continuous progress in all its cars—progress that will not merely follow public demand, but will anticipate that demand, in performance and design and comfort and style.

The persistency of the Giants was similar in a great measure to that of the Philadelphia Athletics in the American League. The Athletics had American League. The Athletics had a greater margin than the Giants to overcome, but the National Leaguers had much stronger opposition to face. At one period in the race, the Cardinals held the impressive margin of six games. That was on June 24, when the Giants and Chicago Cubs were tied for second place. Then began a severe struggle between Chicago, New York and Cincinnati for the runner-up position, a struggle the runner-up position, a struggle which aided the St. Louis Cardinals greatly. The Giants twice fell to fourth place only to rally and force their way back into second. Then when they faced the Cardinals and won three straight early in August, their chances of winning the pennant were considered extremely bright. Again, in their meeting a week ago, the Giants proved their superiority in the pinch by taking three out of four from the Cardinals. Then they struck a snag when they faced the Cubs, and this series lost them the title.

The courageous stand of the Giants, despite the fact that New York is not as popular a winner as others might be, won for them many friends. They played a game that was typical of asset was their enthusiasm, for in pitching and hitting strength they were slightly under that of the Cardinals. In fielding they were remarkably brilliant. But in their enthusiasm they were unmatched, it was allowed the containing the pennant were considered extremely bright.

With the exception of Yale, Harvard and princeton, which do not open their seasons until next Saturday, intercolegizate football started its season of 1928 in the eastern colleges of the United States last Saturday. A few vident in their last-inning rallies and their ability to win extra-inning games had been played on the following week-end; but not until the considerable of the cardinals. They have a considered extremely bright.

CARDINALS ANNOUNCE ELIGIBLES FOR SERIES

NEW YORK (P)—The St. Louis National League Baseball Club's eligible players for the World Series have been announced pending final approval by Commissioner K. M. Landis. There is a possibility that C. C. Littlejohn, right-handed pitcher, will be ruled eligible since one of the outfielders. Walter Roettger, is only nominally eligible. Littlejohn was sent to Houston of the Texas League briefly in August and September, but rejoined the club last week.

The 25 Cardinals are: G. C. Alexander, W. H. Sherdel, Jesse J. Haines, C. E. Mitchell, C. F. Rhem, S. W. Johnson, A. C. Reinhart, F. M. Frankhouse and Harold A. Haid, pitchers; J. C. Wilson and Earl S. Smith, catchers; J. L. Bottomley, Frank F. Frisch, W. J. V. Maranville, A. A. High, R. A. Holm and T. J. Thevenow, infielders, and C. J. Hafey, T. L. Douhlt, E. R. Orsatti, G. W. Harper, F. R. Blades, Walter Roettger, J. L. Martin and N. H. Williamson, outfielders.

Non-playing eligibles are W. B. McKechnie, manager, and J. A. Sothoron and J. J. Onslow, coaches.

VOIGT DEFEATS PERKINS NEW YORK—Holding Thomas P. Perkins, the British amateur champion, even for 15 holes, George J. phant for the third successive time. The courageous uphill struggle of the Athletics, however, will go down in baseball history as one of the greatest. The reputation that the Yankees have gained for themselves—that of being able to win when the winning counted the most—is still intact. Threatened on several occasions early in the race, they proved master of the situation at all times and particularly during the last stages of the race was their faculty for winning at the right times brought out forcibly.

finished in the last first-division posi-tion, seven games behind St. Louis.

The struggle for fourth place be-tween Washington and Chicago fur-nished something of interest for fans.

The Senators finally won out due to much better performances by their pitchers than they got earlier in the season. Detroit was somewhat of a disappointment to fans, finishing in sixth place and Cleveland's seventh place position was a drop from its sixth place position of 1927. As for sixth place position of 1927. As for Boston, it finished 6½ games better than it did last year but this was not good enough to move it out of last place where it has ended four straight seasons, counting the present one. Huggins' Logic Good

The Yankees are to be congratulated upon their victory, for they maintained their lead down the last stretch without the services of two of their best men, Pennock and Lazerri. The Yankees were not the great hitting machine that they were in 1927 by a large measure. They possessed the punch in the pinches and had fine pitching especially from Hoyt and Pipgras, not to mention the performances gras, not to mention the performances of Henry W. Johnson, a newcomer. Johnson won four games against the Athletics. The season showed that the Yankees, without their tremendous hitting, are champions, and it brought hitting, are champions, and it brought out perceptibly, the strength that the club possesses in all branches of the game. This strength was somewhat overlooked by fans in 1927 with hitting and after halving the next three holes, victories for the runners-up would have put two clubs in a league win-ning 100 games in one season. Huggins' logic is clear. His club won 100 games as he expected. Incidentally it is the second straight season that the Yankees have won more than 100 games, for in 1927 they set up a league record in victories in one year with 110. This gives them a record of 211 victories to 97 defeats in two succes-

Athletics were evidently imbued with the idea they could not defeat the leaders. Their great pitching staff failed utterly in these crucial games and to top things off in their last meeting of the season with the chance held out to them to go into the lead, the Athletics again failed legism three.

The record of dual series between the Yankees and Athletics might well be all that is needed in an American League analysis of the season. It shows, unquestionably, the whole reason why the Yankees are again pennant winners and the result was a straight-set victory for the American, 6—2, 6—2. Captures the Opening Polo Match Against the Argentines by 7 to 6

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR WESTBURY, N. Y .- A United States polo team that swept over all the ob-stacles that had hampered its prepa-rations, and played a brand of combi-nation team play that has never been bettered since the game was established at Meadowbrook, won the initial victory in the international match for the championship of the Americas, from a team from the Argentine that was so close to it that only the breaks of the game prevented the match from going the other way, on International Field, Meadowbrook, Saturday, by the margin of one goal, with the tying shot in the last minute of play rolling shot in the last minute of play rolling just outside the posts of the goal that the Americans were defending. The score was 7 to 6, and the teams had played so closely together that the score was tied three times in the interim, at 2-all, 5-all and six-all. It would be practically impossible to say which member of the many times reconstructed four played the better.

say which member of the many times reconstructed four played the better, though there was no doubt as to the skill with which each one went about his part of the job. At No. 1, W. Averill Harriman, taken back into the lineup at the last moment, after sharing in the shakeup that had come earlier in the final week, was far better than ever before, and his final dash from midfield, with Lewis L. Lacey in close pursuit, to score the winning goal from 70 yards out in the field, more than balanced his misses in the earlier part of the game. He scored three other goals, also, but these were due to the fine support that his associ-ates gave him. Hitchcock, also, though bearing the burden of cap-taincy as well, was hitting hard and well, and his three goals also played a great part in the victory.

Guest One of the Stars It was the defense displayed by Winston F. C. Guest, in this, his first international match for the United States, and the equally skillful play of Malcolm Stevenson, the veteran No. 3, that prevented what appeared to be a cock and Harriman to display their attacking power in the chukkers. The young Yale player used his famous wallop with such skill and discretion wallop with such skill and discretion who selected it to the ball, passed it to horsemen from the pampas were halted many times when a score seemed inevitable. On one occasion a latter scored on a near side drive, halted many times when a score seemed inevitable. On one occasion a foul in crowding J. B. Miles right in front of the goal, resulting in a fall of the No. 3 of the Argentines, accounted for one of the Argentines, accounted for one of the Argentines, but he stopped many other rushes that threatened worse results. Stevenson also, especially in the trying time when the Argentines were leading at 5 goals to 2, was such a steadying factor in the game that he counted for much of the change of fortune that held the visitors to a single goal for the balance of the Americans and the judges to score the tying goal.

the first chukker, when first Harriman and then Hitchcock made goals. Fol-lowing a series of dashes by the forlowing a series of dashes by the forwards of both teams, successfully warded off by the defense players, Nelson sent the ball over the sideboards near midfield. But on the ensuing throwin, Harriman made a quick break out of the scrimmage, and a long drive placed the ball in good position in front of the goal. Then in a wild dash to get away from the pursuing Lacey, he caught the ball with a poke that rolled it between the posts. The other goal resulted from a free hit by Hitchcock, from the 60-yard line, after a try by Guest had been line, after a try by Guest had been deflected by Nelson for a safety.

With the start of the second chukker, carpet tactics by the Argentines, with the ball kept well in hand, began to tell on the American defense, and a series of short taps by Lacey scored their fact tool. their first goal. A chance for Harri-man with a clear field failed from his wide shot. Then another combination of Nelson, Miles and Lacey scored once more, when Lacey received a pass at midfield, and following his clearing shot, scored from 60 yards. WINS BY A GOAL

The third chukker added two more to the Argentine total. After a series of exchanges in which the defense of each team stopped the threat, the Argentines got the ball down close to the United States goal, and in an attempt by Nelson to score on a short backhander, a mixup occurred close to the posts with Guest crowding. Wiles the posts, with Guest crowding Miles, so that the Argentine was dismounted. The umpires granted a claim of foul, and a free shot from the 30-yard line by Lacey scored.

Argentina continued to press the attack, and though one sweep down the field by the Americans required the services of Lacey to stop it, close to his own goal, a return of Lacey to a clearing shot by Guest went to Kenny, who sent it to Miles, and with the No. I riding Guest out of the play, Miles scored for the visitors.

Conditions Reversed

The balance of the game found the conditions reversed. Hardly had the fourth chukker started, when it became evident that in place of the defensive style of play which Stevenson and Guest had been using, they were now set to prevent further damage by now set to prevent further damage by keeping the play as close to the Argentine goal as possible: Hitchcock set the pace by a wallop from the 60-yard line boards, for the third goal. Then, following a foul which brought the ball back into the American goal mouth, the persistent attack drove down once more, and though many misses in the ensuing scrimmages resulted, finally a centering shot by sulted, finally a centering shot by Guest gave Harriman a shot that went true. This left the score at half time with the Argentines leading by the margin of one goal, 5 to 4.

The United States team resumed its still hardly accurate enough to do damage in face of the close defense of the Argentines, and the resort to long shots that followed caused many misses by narrow margins. No score came though the play was mostly on the Argentine side of the middle of the field. But at the start of the sixth, though three shots over the Argentine goal line went wild, the fourth hit out by Lacey was turned toward center by Guest, and a brilliant attempt by Hitchcock, while running across the goal mouth, went through, to tie the

Fine Combination Play

Probably the finest combination play of the game gave United States the lead soon afterward. A foul when Lacey crossed Stevenson, had forced the Argentine back to hit out from his own goal, and though he made a brilliant drive close—to the west boards, Hitchcock, on John, his famous Argentine pony, beat the man the game.

The part that the ponies played in the result was too important to be slighted. For the greater part of the game the speed of the American ponies was far greater than the Argentines was far greater than the Argentines could cope with. In the initial period and again in the crucial fifth, Tobiano, ridden by Hitchcock, and Bella of tries hefers. to have several tries for goals deviate from the direct path under the riding tactics of the defense, which forced tries before the attacker had position. This brought the game to the final chukker with the score tied at 6-all.

Right at the start of the final chuk-Hight at the start of the final chuk-ker, after Lacey had halted a drive by Hitchcock, the ball went to the side-boards, and Harriman, clearing the scrimmage, got the ball with a wallop that brought it clear of the crowd, and dashing after it, made a drive that came just as Lacey was overtaking him with a slight slice that brought him with a slight slice that brought the ball just inside the near post, for a perfect goal from 70 yards out, according to most estimates. Argentines Attack

The balance of the chukker found the Argentines attacking with their greatest power, but their shots just escaped the posts, with Miles, Lacey and Nelson pressing the attack. But the clearing shots of Guest turned the attack, and Harriman had another chance to score, only to send the ball aside. A foul by Stevenson forced Guest to hit out from his own goal, but

The New Yorker, holder of the professional championship of the United States since it was instituted a year ago, successfully defended his title in the final round of the second annual renewal of the championship, by defeating Kozeluh, holder of the European title since 1919 in a four-set tion, broke Kozeluh's service in the reating Kozelin, holder of the European title since 1919, in a four-set match at the Stadium of the West Side Tennis Club, on Saturday afternoon. The score was 8—6, 6—3, 0—6, 6—2. This gives Richards a second leg on the Gushee trophy, first contended for a year ago, when Howard O. Kinsey was runner-up. O. Kinsey was runner-up.

The soft turf of the stadium court damp from the moisture in the air, played some part in the result, but even without its aid, it is question-able if Kozeluh could have stood up against the volley play that Richards showed. Though called for years the greatest of volleyers, Richards never showed finer skill in forecourt play than in his match with the famous Czech on Saturday. Not only on high shots, but equally in the trying re-turns from below the level of the net, on the skillfully placed returns of Kozeluh, was Richards invincible His handling of lobs also was brilliant. Only in the third set, when he eased off perceptibly in the later games to conserve his energy for the fourth set, after the rest, did Richards fail to hold the upper hand.

The Czech found great difficulty in covering court at the start of the match, as he was wearing rubbersoled shoes, and is not accustomed to play in spiked shoes, as Richards did. So, after the third game, Kozeluh took them off and played in his socks for them off and played in his socks for

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONSTON DULUTH, Minn, - The conte plated changes in the hockey rules for the 1928-29 season, which are being considered by the rules committee of the National Hockey League, will greatly aid offensive play if adopted, William Grant, secretary of the American Hockey Association and manager of the Kansas City Playmora said on his return to Duluth from the National Hockey League semiannus meeting at Montreal. Among the most radical changes proposed in the National League rules, which at present differ somewhat from those in the American Hockey Association, are those prohibiting ragging the puck and packing the defense. These two rules were included in the code of the American Hockey Association last season and tended to speed up the game considerably. Both rules call for minor penalties, the first being an effort by ing player to stall the game

ing player to stall the game by playing with the puck behind his goal. and the second when forwards fall back to the defense line forming a five-man defense in front of the goal tender and refusing to skate with the puck as provided in the American Hockey Association rules.

Another proposed change, which would be new for both leagues, is to eliminate offside penalties in the defense zone once the puck carrier has crossed the offensive blue line for a shot on goal. This rule would permit the wings of the puck carrier to charge in on the goal tender and play rebounds, one of the most thrilling plays of hockey. This rule undoubtedly would greatly increase scoring, the lack of which is the greatest drawe back to the game of hockey from the spectators' standpoint.

Still another contemplated change in the rules is to increase the width of the goal nets. According to Mr.

in the rules is to increase the width of the goal nets. According to Mr. Grant, this rule will likely be put into effect, as most National League managers and coaches are in favor of a larger net. Some coaches and man-agers hope to have the nets enlarged by six inches, while others are willing that the citadels be widened by a foot.

John Howard, Friend to Prisoners

There have been great soldiers, men who have fought and conquered and given their all for their faith and their country. The world acknowledges and honors them as heroes, Heroes of War.

In the realm of heroism are others who have conquered, not by the force of might or of arms, but by faith, courage, and perseverance, men and nomen whose lives have been one long struggle against overwhelming odds to carry out their purposes of good for their fellow man; men and women so steadfast and true that this world is far better because of their sacrifices. These are the Heroes of Peace.

But when he was 17 years old, his father having left a large estate, John thought he would leave business and live a life of luxury and ease. As you will see, his life was as you will see, his life was the her from easy, because he was too warm-hearted and unselfish to live easily while others were in misery.

He began to make repairs on his home at Cardington and as the gardens had grown into wild confusion he was very busy putting them into order again. Every day he made a visit to the house and watched the order again. Every day he made a visit to the house and watched the progress of the workmen. He timed his visits so that he would meet the baker on his daily rounds. he had not studied at school. He realized that if he wished to travel and mingle with the people he liked he must have a good education. And so he began to study science and philosophy, and the different lan-guages, Spanish, French, German, Dutch and Italian.

Sometimes he rode on horseback through the neighborhood making friends with the farmers, and some times he took his books and finding a quiet, secluded spot in the woods would lie for hours reading and dreaming.

After three years of quiet life he decided to visit Lisbon, Portugal, where he hoped to be of use to the poor people who had lost their homes by an earthquake. So, in June, 1756, the Hanover, a tall ship bound for Portugal, sailed out of the harbor in England with John Howard on board. No sooner had the tall ship reached the open Atlantic than the lookout saw in the distance a swift sailing bark which speedily overtook the slower vessel, and firing a shot across her bows ordered the Hanover to surrender in the name of France. And as France and England were not friendly at Brest in France, as prisoners—the officers, the passengers and the

A golden glow is on the birch foliage, a rich rainbow of dewy flowers, on meadow, hedge, and ditch bank.

Taking the boat, the Gösta Berling, for the north, seems the more inter esting when one remembers that when the Saga was written the railroad had been extended no further than the south end of the lake. Everywhere the lumber industry is in evidence; sawmills and pulp fac-tories, and long rafts of logs being towed by powerful tug boats, on waters that are lavender, green, and blue in the distance; ebon in the shadow of the crags, and gold over the sunny sandbank shallows. The boat in making an almost straight line north may land on either side of the lake, owing to its slight turns.

At Ostra Emtervik Selma Lager-löf's birthplace may be pointed out to one, a place often sketched by outstanding writers, hence well known the world over. Christian Science, however, is now revealing to the world what the Savour really is; and it has uncovered the beliefs of error which the true Saviour is destroying. This Science of Christianity reveals the eternal fact of but one God, divine Mind, reflected throughout the universe, including spiritual man, God's image and likeness; and it shows that the identity and continuity of God's man can be discovered and realized within the consciousness of every receptive individual.

Christian Science further reveals the fact that the mind of mortals (termed in the Bible "the carnal mortal mind," the conditions and testimony of the five personal mateto bring complete salvation from the errors of sin, sickness, and death, Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 164), "The Science of Christianity, that has appeared in the ripeness of time, rethis will continue to be seen more and all-powerful.

This holy influence, this healing power, called "Immanuel," then, is the Christ, the And, through divine power derived from God, Christ, Truth, is adequate to destroy every form of error, sickness and disease included.

In Christian Science, the sons and daughters of men are daily finding this powerful Saviour as ever present, immediately available in consciousness to guide, protect, heal, and bless them in their Christian endeavors to follow the Master in lifting up the Christ. They find it a blessed privilege to realize the ministrations of this Saviour; and they are enabled through sincere reliance on Christ as explained in Christian Science to prove, more and more, the statement of Mrs. Eddy (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Mismind," and in Christian Science, cellany, p. 122) that "the real Christian Scientist can say his Christ is risen and is not the material Christ rial senses) is error, the error from of creeds, but is Truth, even as Jesus which mortals need to be saved. # A Hals Painting Restored

In 1916 Mr. J. J. Moubray of Naemoor presented a picture by Frans Hals to the Scottish National Gallery in memory, as he said, of happy wet Saturday afternoons spent there in his youth. The subject was the head and shoulders of a merrylooking man with brown curly hair,

The actual painting had the characteristics of Hais' style but there were experts who held it suspect and denied its authenticity. This was the position of affairs when the board of trustees invited Dr. A. Martin de Wild, the well-known Hague picture restorer, to report upon the condition of the Dutch pictures in the Scottish collection. After certain tests de Wild proposed that the picture should be X-rayed. This was done, and it was seen that not only was the hat an addition, but there were also signs of over-painting on the glass.

The next development took place at The Hague, where Dr. Schneider, an assistant at the Mauritshuis, drew Dr. de Wild's attention to the existence of a contemporary print by the Dutch engraver, Jan Vandevelde, of a picture almost identical with the Edinburgh one except that the man wore no cap and instead of a glass held the jawbone of an ass. That print is reproduced in Dr. Bode's book on Hals with the note, "The original is lost."

OUTLOOK FOR STEEL TRADE

About 150,000 tons have been bought for subway extension this year, and 50,000 tons more will be placed in 1928. A water tunnel from Yonkers to Brooklyn will sequire 20,000 tons. New York normally consumes 25 per cent of the structural steel made in the country, and is easily living up to this figure. There are 14 new structural projects involving 1000 tons or more each throughout the country. Shipments of pig iron in September wree the largest for any month this year, though new buying is at a very low ebb because this is the period between the fourth quarter and first quarter purchasing movements. However, buying at Cleveland stays brisk, sales for week before last having been nearly 40,000 tons.

Probably there was a net increase by six active blast furnaces last month. The composite price of pig iron is $17.71 a ton, which is within 4c of the high price of the year in February. The iron market is very strong, as has been ascertained by melters who overstayed their market and have found it difficult to induce producers to make price cone ssions.

The melt of pig iron has been in-ereasing rapidly. Operations along the Atlantic seaboard now average 85 per cent of capacity compared with 75 per

The power will be sent over a 220,000 voit transmission line 268 miles long, and will be distributed by the commission in the Toronto area to supplement the power now supplied from Niagara Falls.

250 TUBE USED IN FRESHMAN POWER SETS

Low-Priced Model Uses Regular Shield Grid R. F. Tube

Using a UX-250 or super-power tube capable of more volume than is ever wanted in the home, so as to have an ample reserve of power at all times, in a popular-priced A-C receiver, and with a UX-222 shieldgrid tube as the radio-frequency amplifier, a super-sensitive, highly selective A-C receiver selling at a very low price is announced by the Freshman Company.

In meeting the trend toward greater volume, the Freshman engineers decided to go directly to the largest power tube available for radiocast reception, namely, the 250 type with an undistorted output of type, with an undistorted output of well over 2 watts at the working voltage applied in this case, as against a tenth that output for the usual UX-171-A operating at a safe voltage.

This super-power amplifier tube is employed in the Freshman type N-receiver chassis, which comprises six A-C tubes as follows: Three equaphase stages of high gain radio-frequency amplification, a detector, a first audio stage, and the 250 power tube. The components, including the tube. The components, including the power supply unit, are contained in a neat metal cabinet with handsome two-tone finish and bronze face plate framing the illuminated selector dial and knob, and with switch and volume control knobs on either side, in the case of the popular-priced table

Audio System Details

The audio-frequency amplifier has been the subject of original research and engineering. Freshman engineers have studied the causes of distortion in the usual audio transformer-coupled amplifier, and have traced them for the most part to overloaded tubes and saturated trans-former cores. The former factor has been taken care of by using proper voltages on the tubes. The latter factor has been solved by the novel use of thoroughly lapped transformer laminations, instead of the usual butted laminations.

In this manner it is possible to prevent saturation of the transformer core, while a high volume level is automatically maintained. The thorough lapping of transformer laminations, although involving ingenious production methods, has proved far more effective than the proved far more effective than the use of special and costly nickel steels or bulky cores.

In addition to eliminating core saturation, the Freshman engineers have worked out a generally accepted characteristic in the audio transformers employed in A. C. sets for reduction of hum. Thus the amplification curve in the Freshman audio amplifier starts off at 60, with modest volume, rising to good volume at 120, and continuing its rapid rise to a high level at 175 rapid rise to a high level at 175 cycles, when the curve flattens out and is maintained to 10,000 cycles.

The power supply unit of the Model N receiver chassis utilizes the UX-281 half-wave rectifier tube, supplying from 325 to 350 volts for the plate of the UX-250 tube, as well as the B and C requirements for the entire receiver. Filament and heater windings supply the raw A-C low voltages for the tubes. The current drain on the rectifier is from 60 to 70 milliamperes, so that the rectifier is running well within its rating, for

The "Mystery" Set

Then there is the Freshman Mysbination with the usual UX-226 and UY-227 A-C tubes, and the UX-171-A power tube. The Freshman engineers have succeeded in employing the usual UX-222 tube with its filament operating on raw alternating cur-The radio-frequency amplification, it is claimed, averages from 25 to 40, despite the limitations imposed by operating the filament on raw A-C. The grid bias is kept rather high to prevent modulation due to

This radio-frequency amplifier. with what may well be considered the last word in tube efficiency, is said to be capable of results exceed-ing those obtained with the usual two stages of radio-frequency ampli-fication. The single shield-grid stage of radio-frequency amplification is followed by the usual UY-227 heater type A-C detector, the first audio stage with the UX-226 filament A-C tube, and the UX-171-A power tube. A method of introducing a small mount of regeneration, automatically maintained well below the oscillating point so as to avoid anything approaching distortion, is employed, which more than compensates for the slight reduction in the shield-grid tube gain.

MONTREAL-N. Y. AIR SERVICE MONTREAL (A)-An air mail, express and passenger service between Montreal and New York was inaugurated today. More than 50 planes from various parts of the dominion and the United States were at the St. Hubert airport to celebrate the opening.

The Price of Fame!

S OPERATOR to the MacMillan expedition, Clifford Himoe, A pictured above, gained considerable fame, but alas! Upon his return home he was greeted by those who welcomed him, accompanied by the inevitable photographer. Torn from his operating room on the Bowdoin, he was planked down in a small open sailboat

To begin with, no one is going to mount radio apparatus in the open on a boat. It needs all the protection from the elements that it can have. An examination of the photograph shows that there is no antenna connected to the set, which is presumably a transmitter, since he is seen holding a key along with it. But wait! There are no wire connection this key to spething whether the set is a vaccing. wires connecting this key to anything, whether the set is a receiver or transmitter. This is, indeed, true wireless!

Another little thing they overlooked was the need of A and B batteries. But, of course, this is a batteryless radio era. In the set are plug-in honeycomb coils which will cover around 600 meters. Of course, the fact that Mr. Himoe is famed for his communication work on 21 meters is the reason that they dig up 600-meter coils. The connection is so obvious. Any doubt that the above statements are other facts is dispelled by the uncomfortable expression on the operator's face. He well knows the "ragging" he will get from all his fellow "hams." High, indeed, is the price of fame.—V. D. H.

the Civil War. Only music of the highest type will be presented, and the selections to be played will be taken from the works of such composers as Mendelssohn, Ganne, Massenet, Nevin and Paderewski. From time to time the DeWitt collection of early examples of the Virginia Reel will be drawn upon for material. Andy Sanella will be director of the orchestra.

In connection with some of these old dances, the calls that have been used for dancing will be featured, so that listeners who know the dance forms may enjoy them more thoroughly. No modern dance music will be played. Each program will open and close with Mendelssohn's "Spin-ning Song."

The Pickard Family, specialists in songs of the southern mountains, who sing them in the traditional folk manner, will take part in each Interwoven program. One of their numbers for the opening program will be "Rabbit in the Pea-Patch."
Besides the Pickard Family and the full orchestra, there will also be novelty group made up of guitar. accordion, violin, banjo, and har-monica, which will present such numbers as "Arkansas Mule" and

"The Hayseed Club," the latter a
"hoe-down" typical of the period

A fur warden thus told about it in a letter to KGO: "It had been snowing all day, with a miserable wind blowing. It was dark when I pulled up to an igloo, the first sign of life after hours of traveling. I crawled through a tunneled place in the snow to get inside. When I entered there sat an old prospector, as comfortable as could be, with a headset on, listening to some old time songs from KGO."

Japanese Adopt Trial by Jury

Steps Are Taken for Its Modified Application After Many Years' Study

TOKYO (A)—Trial by jury has been incorporated into the legal sys-tem of the Japanese Empire. Heretirely on China and continental Eu-

The purpose of the innovation was explained to be the democratisation of criminal procedure and the in-crease of popular confidence in the courts by opening the way for greater public participation in criminal trials.

The new jury system is limited in scope, and the inauguration of it followed a long period of cautious study and preparation. The law was passed by the Diet nearly six years ago and promulgated in April 1923. In the intervening period many Japanese judges have visited America and England to witness the procedure of jury trials. They have sat on the bench with American and British judges and studied the methods of presenting evidence to juries and udges' instructions to jurors.

The principal criminal courts of the country have undergone considerable physical remodeling to make room for the seating of juries and provide dormitories for jurors held from public contact during a long trial. These accommodation ody the latest improvements and

Trial by jury will be used only in criminal cases, and is limited to cases of capital punishment or by mprisonment exceeding three years. It will be granted only on application of the accused, who must ask for jury trial within 10 days of his ormal summons for public trial. The jury's power will be limited. It can only render a verdict of "guilty" or "not guilty" on the charge preferred by the public procurator. A presiding judge is empowered to throw out a decision which he deems improper and im-

Sardinia The early history of Sardinia, in the Mediterranean Sea, is unknown. This island contains many important prehistoric monuments belonging to the Bronze Age, as many as 6000 "nuraghi" being still traceable there These houses were noted as curios-ities during the Roman invasion of Sardinia, in the fifth century B. C. Milwaukee Journal: The big parade this year ought to be a march to the polls by the millions who have been stay-athome voters in the last two presidential elections.

Orkney Islands The Orkney Islands, off the north coast of Scotland, were ruled by jarls (earls) under the supremacy of the kings of Norway from very early times until 1231. These islands and the Shetland Isles became the property of the crown of Scotland as payment of the dowry of the bride of James III of Scotland.

British Trade Union Policy

THE Trade Union Congress at Swansea carried to a definite and advanced stage the new tendencies, noted in these columns from time to time, of the industrial side of the British labor movement. These tendencies are away from the militant policy of the earlier post-war years-which brought a host of troubles and heavy loss to the unions as well as to industry-and toward co-operation with employers in a united effort to raise industry to a higher level of efficiency, so that the productive sources, from which alone better conditions for the workers can be derived, may be greatly en-

The general council of the congress is now in a much stronger position from which to go forward with its new tasks than it was before the Swansea decisions. It is no longer possible for its critics to assert that it does not possess a mandate from the affiliated unions to continue the discussions with the employers' group on the co-operation policy and the means by which a wide reorganization of industry may best be carried out. These discussions will probably be resumed in October. Many matters of far-reaching importance on the agenda prepared at the outset have yet to be considered. These include a much fuller study of the comprehensive measures of industrial reconstruction implied by the term "rationalization," a subject which involves consideration of many questions relating to the position and conditions of the workers in the new large-scale and centralized industrial organizations which are now develop-

The more distinct question of the establishment of a national joint council, partly to correlate and supervise machinery for conciliation in trade disputes, and partly to initiate a great work of industrial research, now stands in a field by itself. The scheme has been adopted by the employers' group and the Trade Union Congress. But the employers, unlike the congress, are not fully representative and they have no power by themselves to put the scheme into operation. This can only be done if it is accepted by the two great national organizations of employers, the Federation of British Industries, which will have to enlarge its functions to enable it to participate in the work of the council, and the Confederation of Employers' Organizations, a body which has hitherto kept its work and discussions somewhat obscure and which will have to obtain wider powers from its affiliated federations of employers in the various industries.

The decisions of these two bodies may not be known for several weeks. In certain important industries, notably engineering, iron and steel, and shipbuilding, it is known that differences of opinion have arisen, one section contending that each industry should be left to work out its own conciliation methods autonomously, and the other holding that, as industry becomes more complicated and interrelated, the effects of a dispute in one trade affect many others, so that if industrial co-operation is to be a reality a much wider view of all these matters must be taken.

So far as certain influential industrialists are concerned, there lies behind the opposition to the national joint council scheme a wider objection to the whole idea of broad agreements between employers and the executive body of the Trade Union Congress on industrial fundamentals "hich should be applicable throughout the field of manufacturing activity. At the moment the relative strength of the opposing sections is not known, but the confident belief is expressed by those who are in close touch with the situation that finally the national council policy will prevail, and that powerful support will be forthcoming in the principal industries for the general co-operation movement.

Farm Problems Abroad

GRICULTURAL prices are determined by the world supply and demand. The farmers of the United States are not the only ones who realize this, for it is recognized in all countries. In the solution of the farm problem, therefore, any workable plan for relieving the situation must recognize the dominance of the price as established in the world markets. This is an economic fact which cannot be set aside by legislation, and in that connection American farmers may with profit consider what is happening in Russia and in Norway. For these two countries also have a farm problem, although it arises from differing domestic conditions. In both Norway and Russia the farmers are not getting a sufficient return for their crops as measured in the goods they must purchase. The farmers of the United States are inclined to advance the same claim, yet it is patent that it is more acute in both Norway and Russia.

Russia has a potential supply of grain that is not surpassed by any other country of Europe. The exportable surplus has afforded that balance of trade adequate to offset the foreign purchases of the country. Russia has always paid for her imported merchandise with wheat. Today under Soviet rule the Russian farmer gets so little for his grain and must pay so much for his clothes and machinery that he is not inclined to grow I any more than he wants for his individual needs. The Soviet Government cannot afford to offer the Russian farmer any more because the grain cannot be sold abroad for any more than the price quoted in the world markets. Against that economic fact a governmental monopoly for export is impotent.

On the other hand, Norwegian farmers cannot expect to grow sufficient grain to meet home needs. The expense of growing such grain as they now do makes the domestic product more expensive than grain purchased abroad. The cheaper foreign grain threatens to exterminate domestic crops, and the Government is compelled to step in and establish a grain monopoly. Efforts to abolish the state monopoly have been recognized as unwise, and Norway has adopted a law re-creating it, effective next spring. Under this law the Norwegian Government will purchase all the grain grown in Norway and will buy abroad only enough grain to complete the needs for domestic consumption. The price maintained by the monopoly will, it is presumed, be adequate to compensate domestic producers.

These examples show that no country is independent of the effects of the world price of agricultural products. Government aid, in its monopolistic form exemplified in Russia, is impotent, whereas in the case of Norway it is deemed essential. Russia produces a surplus, but Norway has a deficit. The contrast in economic premises is obvious. Neither system, probably, would be applicable to the United States, yet American authorities might study them both with profit.

Where Corruption Flourishes

THE retort "You're another!" more politely referred to as "tu quoque," is not perhaps the best defense against the charge of wrongdoing. Yet it carries weight with most people, and will undoubtedly come instantly to thought when the average man reads Governor Smith's attack upon Mr. Hoover, as a participant in Republican corruption. Because Mr. Hoover sat in the Harding Cabinet, and said nothing of the Teapot Dome scandal, of which he might very well at that time have been ignorant, Governor Smith accuses him of responsibility

It may well be retorted that New York's Governor, who has been a member and beneficiary of Tammany Hall since he was twentyone years of age, recently condoned all the notorious political, financial, and social crimes of that organization with the one sweeping, though not convincing, defense that because it had endured 139 years it couldn't be wholly bad. The spectacle of one who owes his prominence wholly to Tammany support; one who has never at any time in his life said one word of condemnation of the methods of this organization, accusing a man of Mr. Hoover's proven rectitude and untarnished public service, of corruption, is more ridiculous than convincing.

Friends of Governor Smith declare that as a youth he was unsullied by the methods of the Tammany which he served, while as he has progressed in political power and influence he has controlled that organization and made it into a new Tammany, which we are assured is the abode only of sweetness and light. Yet the recent scandals in the Sewer Department in New York with their disclosures of colossal graft suggest that if the Tammany of today eats with a fork rather than a knife, its appetite is as vigorous as of vore.

Governor Smith has repudiated neither the old nor the new Tammany. So far as any utterances from his tongue are concerned, Tammany stands above criticism. When Senator Owen, whose record of public service was wholly creditable to himself and to the Democratic Party which honored him, declared that he could not support his party's presidential nominee because of the part played by Tammany in nominating him, Governor Smith came promptly to the defense of the organization which had pushed him to the front, and denounced the Senator who had grown gray in honorable service. Mr. Hoover's own reputation is secure. His standing cannot be shaken by the attacks of a political rival. But in this campaign, so full of novel situations, none more amusing has arisen than that of the Tammany nominee denouncing corruption in an opposing party.

Women Voters in 1928

RATIFYING reports from nearly every sec-I tion of the United States indicate that in the November elections this year there will be recorded the largest vote ever cast for the national candidates for President. The totals will be swelled perceptibly, it appears, by the added percentage of women voters who have indicated their interest in the result by registering and by painstakingly informing themselves regarding issues and candidates. It has been pointed out, with or without reason, that the wives and mothers in the United States stand ready to support and defend laws enacted by their husbands and sons in face of that very epposition which now is seeking to convince them that only by the modification or repeal of those laws can the dignity of government be restored and maintained.

It is hardly logical for the agitators of revision or modification to appeal to American women on any such pretext as that set up by the nullification forces. Possibly it may be convincingly argued that the economic and social structure now existing is not perfect, Destructive and lawless influences have combined to lessen the benefits which would result from a strict observance of the law, or, lacking this, by its strict or absolute enforcement. But the observing woman voter, wherever her home may be in the United States, has no difficulty, when she compares the condition of her family; her neighbors, and that of the community about her with that of a decade ago, in discovering the visible evidences of happiness and prosperity where these were once lacking.

There are those, of course, who will insist that the realization of better conditions in the homes and in communities is not the result of the great moral and economic revolution which the Nation has inaugurated. Many will believe this and lend their sympathies and their votes to that party or faction which is opposed to the newer and better order. Thousands of American women will be among these. But it is not reasonable to expect that the women who still remember the hardships and the deprivations which the saloon inflicted upon them and their families will carry the banner of the defeatist faction to the polls. The specious demand for 'light wines and beer" in the name of personal liberty does not bring to them visions of freedom from the distressing slavery from which the home has been emancipated.

British Trade Barometer Rise

OOD grounds for optimism in regard to the Toutlook of British trade, despite present depression, are found by Sir Alfred Herbert, president of the Machine-Tool Trades Federation, in a remarkable wave of prosperity now passing over the industry he represents.

This industry, he rightly points out, is a 'barometer" of trade in that machine tools are the first requisite for every workshop. Increased demand for them thus means that manufacturers expect growth in business. "The volume of orders on hand," Sir Alfred says, "is greater than at any time since 1920, and many machine-tool makers are unable to cope with the demand in spite of the fact that overtime is general throughout the industry and night shifts are being worked in many shops."

Sir Alfred goes on to say: In the British dependencies and throughout Europe the lesson that efficient equipment is the first essential of manufacturing success is being more and more fully recognized. There is, besides, a fuller recognition that labor-saving machinery not only reduces the cost of production and increases the volume of trade, but also brings about steady increases in the rewards of those who operate such machinery.

This is good news for all. A boom in machinery in Britain means that manufacturers see daylight ahead. Otherwise they would not be re-equipping their works. A better understand ing has been reached with Labor. The signal is out for steam ahead.

Rail Wages and the Strike Vote

HERE is no reason to believe that the conductors and trainmen of the western railways will call a strike because of the failure of the arbitration proceedings which have been under way for an extended period of time. The brotherhoods have taken a vote on the question and their leaders are empowered, as a result, to call a strike, but such threats need not be taken seriously. The motive is largely that of a vote of confidence in the union leaders and in their method of procedure, and is so understood by all concerned.

Under the terms of the Watson-Parker Act, rail labor controversies are subject to arbitration, if local adjustment boards fail. Following the arbitration proceedings-if a settlement still is not reached—the United States Board of Mediation may intervene. These successive steps have been taken in the western wage case and, all having failed, the final recourse is through an emergency commission to be appointed by the President, the duty of which is to ascertain and report upon the rights and wrongs of the dispute. Pending the report of this commission both sides agree to maintain a status quo for thirty days, which means that a strike could not ensue until such commission had made its investigation and reported to the

The crux of the present dispute hinges on an offer of an increase in wages of 71/2 per cent if certain rules now in use are abandoned, or 61% per cent if such rules (which the brotherhoods have always insisted upon in the past) are to remain in force. The brotherhoods have rejected the proffered increase on the grounds that the rule in question, namely, that of operating only one locomotive on a freight train, is not now a question in dispute but is, rather, an accepted practice in western railroading.

It is because of this contention that the proceedings have reached an impasse. Yet there should be no compelling reason why, if a railway can save money through double-heading its freight trains and thus haul more cars, it should not be permitted to do so. This is clearly a prerogative of management. The brotherhood's objection is the customary objection of Labor to the introduction of modern methods and machinery on the grounds that increased productivity (in this case, of an individual train crew) will mean less work for others.

In so far as wages go, the trainmen and conductors are entitled to increases corresponding, proportionately to the living costs in the West, with those granted in " East and So ". Even though the rule regarding double-heading is not properly an issue at point, it is well that this matter be cleared up at the same time, since the retention of a rule which runs counter to modern methods of efficiency-even though it may defer temporarily the day when the railroads can function with a smaller staff-is not in keeping with the generally high ideals which have actuated the railway brotherhoods in the past.

Editorial Notes

Lucille LaVerne, the actress, has announced that she will raise a $1,000,000 fund to bring education to children in the remote regions of the Appalachian Mountains. Those who remember the expression of hope and expectancy on Miss LaVerne's face just before the last curtain of "Sun-up," have some conception of the sentiments with which her announcement will be received in many a humble mountaineer's cabin.

The rainfall in the State of Chiapas on the Pacific coast of Mexico is, according to a government geologist, about fifteen feet annually. Louisiana, with a little more than four and three-quarters feet, has more than any other place in the United States, according to the weather bureau. Evidently in Chiapas it never rains but it pours!

Reports of the fine showing made by candidates in preliminary football practice at the schools and colleges are much like presidential straw votes-interesting but not necessarily really indicative of what the actual results will be when the points and ballots are counted.

Afghanistan Faces (Partly) West

7,000,000 intractable Afghan tribesmen, Amanullah has shown a consistently active plan to modernize his mountainous land. His very change of title, in 1926, from Levantine Ameer to Occidental King, stood clear index to this. In the neighbor state of Tibet, the thirtyseven-year-old monarch of the Hindu Kush fastnesses sees stubborn resistance to a similar Westernizing tendency, but in his own country next to no opposition has appeared; what little has tried to raise rebellious head has promptly been reduced to acceptance. For the King is still autoerat, powerful and determined, with an efficient military not only to lead but to lean upon. The amazing (and at times amusing) fact, then, remains that today's very general politico-social adjustments have brought mighty change over the surface of the dreams of Afghanistan-a country larger than France-at the heart of the oldest and most conservative of the con-

When, in his twenty-eighth year, this thoroughgoing Nationalist came to the throne, he showed himself the reorganizer, instanter. Needing force to put through his schemes, he made over the Afghan Army, and now commands 80,000 conscript troops, French-trained; casual levies are things of yesterday. Then he instituted a new system of finance, with taxes to be paid not in kind but money. On this joint basis he asserted and made good the claim of the Central Government against tribalism ecclesiasticism and banditry.

Soon followed formal recognitions of Afghan independence, without qualification of subsidy or indirect control admitted in treaties with Russia and Great Britain. Then began, too, diplomatic relations with most of the leading European capitals. Still a "buffer state" geographically, Afghanistan for a half-dozen years has been mistress in her own house. The hermit policy of long tradition stands no longer.

The young Ameer, as he then still was, next revised local government, establishing a representative régime, two legislative chambers, and if the system is actually not noticably democratic yet it is based on Western ideals. He divided the country into districts, each with its regional consultative assembly. He reorganappeal and a supreme tribunal over all. The law remains Koranic, however; there has been no open break with the Mullahs. ized the administration of justice, establishing courts of Telegraph and telephone wires were strung, and some thing of a start made toward opening modern means of transportation. In this Amanullah's thought is to concentrate upon motor roads, which, in a thinly settled and mountainous land, yield better returns than railways. Besides which the King is an enthusiastic motorist,

All of which was a generously real beginning, striking enough to call forth repeated comment, but what was then, relatively, only an occasional voice, after all, swelled to a world-wide chorus when Amanullah, a few months ago, set out from the most isolated and medieval of Asiatic states to "see Europe." That no earlier Ameer had done such a thing—that this King not only did it, but took with him his beautiful Queen Souriya-that they displayed everywhere (in India, Egypt, Italy, England, France, Germany, Poland, Russia, Turkey, Persia) an intelligent knowledge of foreign ways and a sympathetic

THROUGHOUT the nine years of his rule over | interest in them-all this made the tour as noteworthy as it was unusual.

It was only the other day that Kabul welcomed back her rulers. At once news began to get abroad of what further Westernizing was to follow the Western journey. A geologic survey is to be made by German natural scientists. An engineering contract has gone to an Italian firm. Russian experts have been placed in charge of the Afghan air fleet. Radio equipment has been brought in from France, and French savants are at work in the archæologic field. Most important, it well may prove, comes evidence that the whole outlook of the women of the country is greatly changing. The purdah has been virtually abolished, thanks to the example of the Queen and her ladies in going abroad unveiled. Polygamy has fallen under the royal disapproval: hereafter no state servant may take a secondary wife. Child marriage, before the age of thirteen, is prohibited, as is also the venerable custom of giving away a daughter, in atonement for a misdeed or in satisfaction of a claim. And to Afghan womanhood education now throws wide her doors.

An emphatic word must be written, beyond this, on this vital educational topic. Soon after his accession, Amanullah ordered public notices to be posted everywhere in the kingdom, in which he exhorted the people to send their child on to the schools. Government officials are obliged to do this, under penalty of a fine or even dis-missal from the service. Elementary schools have been established in all towns and some villages. Two new colleges for secondary education, called Amanieyeh and Amani, have been opened at Kabul, the first of which is under a French faculty, the second under a German. Both elementary and secondary schools are free. As yet there are no schools for technical training. Art schools, however, have been instituted at the national capital and in most of the provincial centers. A

Kabul museum of art and archæology has been opened.

Announcement now comes of a Jirgha, or conference of representatives of all classes of the people, at Paghmann, the summer seat of government, for the purpose of notifying the chiefs and popular leaders officially of the next moves in the modernizing progress. Amanullah also intends, it appears, to review the present relations of his state with other powers, and all signs point, further, to a giving of advice which, under existing Afghan conditions, is tantamount to orders, of course.

For this somewhat aggressive monarch declines to face West without several interesting reservations. Occidental customs, he affirms, are by no means to be taken up merely because they are Occidental, but only when of themselves genuinely good. Recent regulations, as well as royal pronouncements, show unmistakably where Amanullah would draw the line. He has, for instance, set his face against drinking. The importation of wines is absolutely prohibited, and "bootlegging" is punishable by two years' imprisonment. Again: detected gamblers are pubhely whipped: forty lashes. Those convicted of giving false weight receive thirty, and to speak evil in the streets wins twenty. There is, too, a law reading to the effect that any offender who tries to use his wealth to influence a verdict shall, for that reason, be imprisoned for three Really, there are a few quite up-to-date peoples in Europe and the Americas who might do a deal worse than take to themselves some of these suggestions. W. J. P.

Notes From Geneva

THE colossal five-franc pieces so widely circulated in A Switzerland which have been for so long either the bane or the delight of tourists, may disappear from circulation if the recommendation made by fifty prominent business men and financiers under the ægis of ministerial support is put into effect. These experts agreed that the five-franc piece which today forms the basis of ordinary commerce is too large and too heavy to be practical. The average individual on a shopping tour is bound to acquire several such pieces if he seeks change, and the bursting of wallets and the weighing down of portemonnaies is an inevitable result. As a solution, the ssuance of five-franc notes was considered, for there are a few such notes now in circulation, but the expense of printing them and their short life were advanced as arguments in support of a new five-franc coin, much smaller than the present one. The conference of business men finally decided to recommend the minting of little fivefranc coins-"dollars"-of nickel, and the Department of Finance will present a report to this effect to the Federal Council.

The beautiful little peninsula jutting into the Lake of Geneva where the League of Nations expects to build its new "Palais" has this summer been serving in a more humble way the cause of international co-operation and amity. For a large proportion of the hundreds of League folk-clerks, stenographers, functionaries, ex-diplomatists and what you will—have been gathering there every noon and bathe while they munch their sandwiches. On the diving raft might be seen the most interestingly het erogeneous group-smiling Orientals, dignified northern Europeans, volatile, excited Latins, athletic English girls, competent Americans, and, for example, a clever Haitian who swims like a fish and gives everybody lessons in diving. The League workers are a cheerful lot, and banter has risen over the water in many languages. 1 1 1

Groups of young girls dressed in white and bearing huge baskets of flowers led a crowd of several thousand sport devotees who gathered at Basel recently to greet the home-coming Swiss Olympic Games victors. The three champions, Haengi, Micks and Mack, who outclassed all competitors at Amsterdam in gymnastics, were greeted with the greatest enthusiasm by the crowd, for gymnastics is now becoming a rival to the Swiss national sport, the erstwhile favorite, rifle and pistol shooting. After the victors had been welcomed by the flow r-bearing maidens as they returned to Swiss soil, they were placed in decorated motorcars and driven through the city harangued by orators in every square, and finally delivered over in state to their families and friends.

Genuine American Indian corn-maize, as it is sometimes described-is seldom enough seen in Switzerland but the city of Geneva believes its æsthetic values to be great enough to warrant placing it in ornamental flower boxes on the city's choicest lamp-posts. Along the Rue de Mont Blanc, beside the lake, and along the banks of the Rhone there are several greatly admired flower boxes, placed about halfway up the lamp-posts. In these boxes are several kinds of attractive blooms, but the central piece-the chef d'œuvre-in each case consists of several vigorous, thriving stalks of Indian corn. That this elevated grain will yet bear fruit and furnish visitors from the United States with corn-on-the-cob-on-the-lamppost seems highly improbable, but many a wanderer from across the Atlantic is to be seen gazing wistfully skyward at the homely waving stalks.

Two years ago the Institute of International Education which has its headquarters in Geneva, hit on the happy idea of an exchange of Swiss and American students, and last year ten young people thirsting for knowledge, journeyed from either side across the Atlantic to pursue their studies. An essential part of the plan is to choose students who could not otherwise afford to go, so that the exchange involves the raising of a considerable sum of money. An appeal was therefore made to Swiss-Americans which resulted in $2500 being contributed which has been devoted to the traveling expenses of Swiss students. The council of the Polytechnical Federal School (Switzerland) and the Swiss committee of the Institute of International Education are also doing their best to provide the same facilities for United States students who have come to Swiss universities as have been granted to the Swiss students in the United States. Thus young Americans under this plan are admitted to Swiss universities without paying the registration fees, and efforts are made to grant them a certain sum for their upkeep. At St. Gallen the Rotary Club is providing board and lodging for one student, while at Zurich the Society of American Friends has taken charge of two young Americans. Next year Geneva is to receive four, Zurich three, and Basel one American student.

The last mail coach has now disappeared from the Canton of Appenzell, to be replaced by a motorbus. It ran from Speicher to Appenzell via Teufen and Haslen. The new post coaches are of course much more convenient and much faster than the old stagecoaches but they are not nearly so pretty. And it is doubtful, when all is said, whether it was not more enjoyable to journey over the great passes of Switzerland perched on the box seat of the old stagecoach while the driver dexterously steered his team of four and sometimes six horses round the perilous turns of the road. What a thrilling moment it was when he gathered the reins in one hand to prove his skill, and with the other took out the coach horn and blew a musical tune which echoed far down the valley. Down and down one went with ever-increasing speed, it seemed, enjoying every moment of the way. But how tedious was the journey upward and how distressing was the thought that the horses had to carry such a heavy burden. It is this thought, how much the horses have gained by the advent of the motorcoach, that reconciles one to the passing of the old order.

"Why 'Commencement'?"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

I wish most heartily to thank you for the article entitled "Commencement" in the Monitor of June 6. I had long been wondering why this word was used to denote what seemed to be the very opposite of "commencement," viz, something final. Your explanation has made the meaning entirely clear to me, and the word, far from being contradictory, as it formerly appeared to me, stands out now with a beautiful fitness and appropriateness. With the understanding of the word "commencement," described partly as: "an elevation to a plane above that upon which one has been living" came a flooding of my thought as I saw the necessity of acquiring that same higher plane of thought in relation to the other person's or nation's point of view as an essential to the attaining of universal brotherhood and peace.

Such an outlook does away with prejudice and hasty, ofttimes unkind and unwarranted, criticism and leads to a broader vision thus bringing about a closer bond of fellowship, and a possibility of ultimate universal unity between men and nations.

"Prohibition Fruitage"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

As I had a pleasant surprise in visiting one of our beaches here in southern California, I would like to tell about it.

For years I have always avoided visiting the pleasure piers and concessions, because there used to be so much drunkenness and lawlessness. I had not seen these places since our part of the country went dry.

I could hardly believe my eyes; the change was so re-markable, so many new, clean sports, such clean, wholesome looking people, and no end of happy children and families; an entire transformation of the atmosphere.
